Summary	The collection has been re-catalogued onto Modesplus following the organisation into sections by an unidentified cataloguer sometime after 1976. The five letters from Foxwell to Bonar which make up section 1 were sent by Bonar to J.M. Keynes in 1938. He presumably presented them to the Marshall Library at a later date. The means of acquisition of the remainder of the collection is unknown. Section 5 was added in August 1998, having been previously uncatalogued and stored in the reception area of the Library.
Summary	Section 1 - correspondence re British Economic Association, later Royal Economic Society. Section 2 - papers relating to Indian Civil Service examinations in economics, correspondence with J.N. Keynes, ICS publications. Section 3 - correspondence and papers re syllabus and funding of economics teaching at London University, fund for advanced university education and research at University College London. Section 4 - British Institute of International Affairs membership papers and press cutting concerning import of newsprint paper. Section 5 - translation of Chapter IV onwards of Knapp's "Staatliche Theorie des Geldes" annotated by Bonar for publication.
Summary	BIOGRAPHY James Bonar was born in Collace, Perthshire, Scotland on 27th September 1852. He was the son of Rev. Dr Andrew A Bonar and his wife Isabella (nee Dickson) of Edinburgh. He studied at Glasgow University and Balliol College Oxford. He began lecturing on Economics in East London in 1877 as a pioneer of the University Extension Movement, founding an Adam Smith discussion club.
Summary	Bonar joined the Civil Service in 1881 as a Junior Examiner in the Civil Service Commission. He rose to Senior Examiner in 1895. In 1907 he was appointed Deputy Master of the Ottawa branch of the Royal Mint, retiring in 1919 to his home in Hampstead.
Summary	Bonar was highly regarded for his work and publications on Adam Smith, Malthus and Ricardo. He was a prolific writer and contributed more than 70 article to Palgrave's "Dictionary" and articles and reviews to the "Economic Journal".
Summary	He was one of the founders of the Royal Economic Society, a Vice-President of both that society and the Royal Statistical Society and an honorary member of the Political Economy Club. President of Section F of the British Association in 1898, he received several Honorary Degrees.
Summary	Bonar was well-liked by fellow economists and politicians, being a close friend of Edgeworth and Ramsey MacDonald. In 1883 he married Mary Mewburn Miller of Liverpool, who died in 1908. They had 2 sons and 2 daughters. Bonar died 18 January 1941 aged 88.

Summary	Tuesday's meeting failed to decide whether to have learned society or association, but resolved to invite 60 "select persons" including Bonar to further meeting about 10 June. Deferred date was at Marshall's behest, perhaps to finish book ['Principles of Economics']. Criticizes [Sidney] Webb's 'Socialism in England' [1890]. "This Fabian literature irritates me." Finds Webb's criticism of John Morley as economic Pharisee "ludicrous".
Summary
Free field	Topic for meetings was setting up "Economic Society", later Royal Economic Society, of which Bonar a founding member. Several pencilled annotations in Bonar's hand: In red pencil, "Keep" in upper right corner of first page, and several underlinings on first and third pages. Summary	Replies to query from Bonar about "[Carl] Menger and [August] Oncken's scheme". "...it seems to me rather an impertinence for two foreigners to edit our economic classics" and Foxwell had tactfully told Oncken so.
Summary	Reprinting old economic literature was main purpose he had in view when drafting scheme for "an Economic Association" [later Royal Economic Society] at Southport meeting of British Association in 1883, also dictionary, translations and a review. [Robert Harry Inglis] Palgrave embarked on dictionary independently but Foxwell hopes all other projects will be controlled and directed by Association. Therefore opposes "this foreign scheme."
Summary	Believes Macmillan has agreed to publish 'Economic Journal', wonders why Marshall preferred Macmillan to Cambridge University Press. Discussed reprints etc. with CUP who willing to undertake if conducted by competent editors under auspices of an Association.
Summary Free field	Told Oncken we hoped to bring out such a series ourselves. Pencilled annotation by Bonar on first page "The Foreigners Scheme & F.in 1883 Economic Association."

Summary	Cannot attend next meeting of Council of "B.E.Assn", at which he was to have reported on Reprints etc. Suggests small committee composed of Higgs, Bonar and himself to go over what he has prepared, so that one of them can present and justify report.
Summary	Two important pending issues: must insist on intelligible financial report on ['Economic] Journal', and need a combined Secretary and Sub-Editor to help Edgeworth. Should be economist and based in London, now that Edgeworth is in Oxford. Proposes Higgs, describes his qualifications including excellent French, good in relations with foreign economists.
Summary	Discusses other alternatives, asks Bonar's views. Has discussed with Edgeworth but without mentioning names. Edgeworth happy to be relieved of responsibility of Secretaryship. Post could not command less than £50 a year.

Summary	Responds to several points made by Bonar, including James Mavor's appointment as Professor of Political Economy at University of Toronto and Harding's pricing of Malthus. Agrees to defer important questions connected with Econ[omic] Ass[ociatio]n for decision next month.
Summary	Was sorry to find movement for amalgamation [with Statistical Society]. Economic Association has not had fair trial, Council only met once a quarter. Edgeworth said it was in rules, this incorrect but explains good deal of failure.
Summary	Foxwell had more to do with starting Association than anyone else. First explored whether Statistical Society could have an economic side, but decided this was hopeless.
Summary	Thinks idea of amalgamation stems from "Edgeworth's feeling of helplessness and unfitness for organizing work." Had long talk with him, will see him again. Important not to decide in a hurry.
Free field	Annotated in red pencil on first page by Bonar "NB Econ Assocn"; also on first page "On Mavor. Also on the [?] essay of M[althus] also on the relation of the Statistical and the Economic". several words underlined in red pencil on various pages; In pencil on last page, in ? Summary	Doesn't feel he can advise about schedule [of examination] by post without knowing more of what is intended. Has not seen notice of ICS competition.

Summary	"Schedules play into the hands of crammers."
Summary	As to Economic History, 17th century writers neglected relative to 18th century ones.
Summary	For the ordinary civilian [in the ICS], knowledge of development of theory less important than history of economic policies. Better to cite books to indicate kind of study desired. But would prefer no schedule, either of books or subjects.

Summary	Draft interpretation clause Bonar sent him has one great fault, in that it puts (b) [Economic History] on equal footing with (a) [Theory]. If Commissioners insist, it must be, but he thinks (b) is not good "principal" subject for examination. Good as subordinate to economic analysis and study of modern economic conditions, but if made important by itself, will probably become "cram" subject of low order.
Summary	[John Neville] Keynes is collecting views on matter, so Marshall sending Bonar's letter to him.
Summary	Proposes new wording for (a).
Summary	Thinks knowledge of facts and power of analysis should be of about equal weight, but two-thirds of knowledge should be of existing conditions and only one third those of past times.
Free field	Bonar appears to have removed part of letter irrelevant to ICS examination, but copied onto top of final sheet Marshall's words introducing his redrafting of (a). Last paragraph of first sheet, which is incomplete and refers to Clark's article, heavily deleted in blue pencil.

Summary	Convinced that "a little accurate and thorough knowledge is better than a superficial acquaintance with a wider range." Competition for ICS about hardest there is and offers widest choice of subjects. Absurd to expect candidates to get up whole subject of Political Economy. Better to set definite books or parts of books to be studied critically e.g. parts of Adam Smith, Ricardo, Sidgwick, Marshall.
Summary	In Economic History one must be definite, ought to choose subjects with bearing on Indian affairs, e.g. land tenure. Cites examples of books.
Summary	Syllabus Bonar sent appears too general in relation to examination concerned which differs from Tripos. Disagrees with Foxwell's proposal.

Summary	Sent draft syllabus to Foxwell and Nicholson, and let Nicholson see Foxwell's letter. Encloses both replies. [Nicholson's is Bonar 2/9]. Largely agrees with Nicholson.
Summary	Favours very brief syllabus "such as suggested in your last letter to Marshall" but has reservations about wording of (b) economic History. Would it be possible to state definitely that two-thirds of marks will be assigned to economic theory and one-third to economic history?
