Summary

The Cairns papers consist of three confidential reports on economic conditions in regions of European and Asiatic Summary

Russia in the summer of 1932, written by Andrew Cairns following his fact-finding tour on behalf of the Empire Marketing Board. The Board was set up in 1926 to promote marketing of Empire products in Britain, and generally to foster intra-imperial trade. It was dissolved in 1933 due to lack of interest overseas. Its functions were partly replaced by the Colonial Empire Marketing Board in 1937.

A copy of a letter to the Premier of Alberta, Canada, was between the pages of the last report. This summarises Cairns's conclusions on the state of the Russian rural economy after his 1932 tour.

Summary There is no written record of how these items came to be in the Marshall Library. It seems probable that they were deposited some time in the 1930's.

Content

Summary Thanks him for his letter of 14 Nov. Has not time to write a comprehensive summary of his conclusions formed as result of 4 1/2 months' travelling in Russia. Would prefer people to draw their own conclusions from the evidence in his reports. Will be in a better position to write next Autumn, after his third visit to Russia.

Summary Wishes to encourage trade between Russia and other countries, particularly producers of surplus foodstuffs. Thinks in general Russian standard of living is declining. Perhaps as much as 60% of all livestock has been lost in last three years. Official Russian statistics of agricultural acreage and production are grossly inflated. There is great shortage of food, perhaps second only to famine of 1920-1. Cannot but conclude that peasants had more food in pre-Revolutionary period.

Summary In his travels had not met any peasants who were happy with their lot. Rumoured that Ukraine Communist Party had even protested to Moscow that drastic changes to policy were needed. Thinks concessions to foreigners will be essential to solve food shortage. Russian government very much less popular with people than was several years ago. No effective organised opposition to it exists, as it would be put down by the army. Predicts change to less extreme form of Communism in next decade.

Summary There will be widespread starvation this winter. Suggests that if World Wheat Conference is held that chief exporting counties offer substantial amount of grain to Russia. Discusses difficulty outside world has in learning truth about economic conditions in Russia.
