Summary	Probably deposited by Mrs J.N. [Florence Ada] Keynes
Content
Summary	Difficult to know how to react to favourable signed review. He would not write merely to thank author, would try to find peg to hang thanks on. Remembers he had long pleasant correspondence with [Thomas Edward] Cliffe Leslie, after not very favourable review of 'Economics of Industry', but thinks that was on Leslie's initiative. Sees no objection to others expressing thanks for good review.
Summary	Historical Board today decided not to change date of History Tripos.
Summary	Postscript: Congratulates Keynes on reviews.

Summary	Asks Keynes's views on calling a meeting of Moral Science Board to discuss proposal on recommended book lists for Special Examination in Political Economy.
Summary	"I think Sidgwick, Foxwell and we two ought to be agreed minutely on the main principle before we have a Board meeting for it."
Summary	Ask Keynes, as favour, to look at Book V [of 'Principles of Economics'] as revised for Second Edition, given that he has now incorporated into it what used to be Book VI, which disturbs some of the chapters and "makes a great hash of the details."
Summary	Congratulates Keynes on his "succession to Browne's place," although never felt sure "that the work was the right thing for you; but I was always certain that you were the right man for the work."
Free field	Annotated in blue pencil on first page, in unidentified hand, "M Sc Board". Keynes succeeded George Forrest Browne as Secretary for Cambridge Local Examinations on 14 Mar 1891.

Summary	Sends Keynes letter from [James] Bonar [not attached] and copy of that part of reply relating to Indian Civil Service [see JNKeynes 1/170/2]. Is getting into "a great state of pressure, and can't see my way to any holiday" so wants to get out of ICS business. Doesn't mind writing or going shares in writing circular letter to collect opinions which could be forwarded to Bonar but doesn't want to collect opinions "retail".
Summary	"[Adolph] Wagner's article is pleasant about me and he goes out of his way more than once to speak heartily in your praise." Augurs success for Keynes's book.
Summary	Postscript: Thanks him for note on Chapter X.
Free field	Dated from John K. Whitaker's edition of Marshall's correspondence. Keynes's diary entry for 14 April refers to the ICS syllabus.

Summary	Copy of part letter from Alfred Marshall to Bonar enclosed with JNKeynes 1/170/1 [Original letter is Bonar 2/8]. Copy in Mary Paley Marshall's hand.]
Summary	Criticizes weight placed by Civil Service Commissioners on economic history in proposed principal examination subjects [for ICS]. Has passed [James] Bonar's letter to Keynes who is collecting some views on subject. "I think knowledge of facts on the one side and power of analysis and reasoning on the other should be of about equal rank. But of the knowledge required two thirds should I think relate to existing conditions and only one third to those of past times."

Summary	Asks Keynes to look at proofs of chapter on Trade Unions for "the new Economics of Industry. It is to be tacked on at the end of the abridgement of Vol I of 'Principles'." Sends two-thirds by this post, rest later. Is sending copies to [John] Burnett and [Thomas Scott] Cree "the newly adopted champion of the enemies of Unions; and asking for suggestions."
Summary	"My brain is still watery, and I am afraid I shall always be ashamed of this Chapter. But the book is out of print, and there is no good in waiting. I have so many other things to do."

Summary	Has just seen Keynes's note on the last paragraph of "slip 183" [presumably an amendment to the text of 'Elements of The Economics of Industry']. "The passage is almost verbatim from the old Economics of Industry p. 201". [which discusses the influence of trade unions on wages] "But I can't defend it. Will you pass it as it now stands?" Mentions criticisms of proofs by Burnett and Cree. Ends: "Yours most thankfully, A.M."

Summary	Refers to need to reschedule some of his lectures because of intermittent visits to London connected with work on Commission [on Labour].
Summary	Discusses [William] Cunningham's letter about him in Pall Mall Gazette and Academy, continuing debate between them [in 'Economic Journal'] on economic history. Had thought of writing to [Economic] 'Journal' but "I find that Edgeworth had told Cunningham that the controversy must end with his attack and my reply. So I must rest patient under the imputation of "not being aware" of facts that are so well known that it is not necessary to state them: and shall not even suggest that Cunningham has read his history almost as hastily as he has Ricardo and my poor little self."

Summary	Thanks Keynes for sending him a document [unidentified]. Asks him to convey advice on discipline to a governess previously part of Keynes household and about to join household of Marshall's sister and her husband [Mabel and Erneste Guillebaud], where Marshall's father also lives. "My Father.. does not know how hard his extremely severe discipline would have made life to all of us children, if it had not been for the constant gentleness of my Mother."
Free field	The last number of the year is unclear. Peter Groenewegen attributes this letter to 1892, whilst listing Stuben as the Marshall's Summer destination for 1894 (Mary Marshall's list). Whitaker is certain of 1894.

Summary	Complains about use of objectionable phrase "empirical study" in last report of Committee of British Association [for Advancement of Science]. Contrasts quality of work on economic history done by English students (better) versus German (weaker because not taught to use inductive method in scientific way). Offers to write making these points more formally, but would prefer not to.

Summary	Unable to find his original text of 3 resolutions, has attempted to reproduce them but with only partial success.
Summary	Discusses quality of recent students he has taught. Comments on industry of Newnham students. "Sanger is the only student (man or woman) who has taken up economics for Part II and was really worth teaching. But one Sanger, or even one Bowley, is a good recompense for 5 years work; and I am content."
Summary	Wanted [Alfred William] Flux to supplement [John McTaggart Ellis] McTaggart as lecturer, consented unwillingly to [John] Venn instead. "Venn and McTaggart are good second fiddles in Economics: but not good first fiddles."

Summary	Has complete set of 'Economist' since 1846, would like Keynes to give him his copies of 'Statist' for years 1879-1885 to complete his own series and not to discard the rest until question of seminars is further discussed. Is concerned about difficulty of providing books for students. "I don't believe it will be possible to do for Americans and others what Continental experience will lead them to expect without a Seminar room and a special library well endowed for each important branch of Study."
Summary	Relates account given by [Lujo] Brentano about punitive action taken by Bavarian agrarian party to cut his book allowance for seminars because he didn't toe their political line. "Brentano says he has 400 pupils, more than half of whom come from north Germany. He is obviously a great success, and also, between ourselves, a great Jaberwock."

Summary	In connection with election to post [junior lectureship] at Sheffield, discusses defects of new Moral Sciences Tripos as training for economists. "Jenkyn Jones is a candidate for Sheffield, I think. He is an able man, tho' slow: but of course he knows economics only as a branch of philosophy; i.e. he knows nothing about it." Refers to his wife's health (improving slowly after illness).

Content
Summary	Startled by news about [Herbert Somerton] Foxwell. Would like his library to stay in England, but even more that he should remain in Cambridge where he is badly needed, as a teacher who can keep abreast of modern work and movements. He and Foxwell "have arranged a most elaborate scheme for M.Sc. Part II".
Summary	Describes deficiencies of Moral Science Tripos and his wish to expand work on economics.
Summary	"The success of the Econ[omic] and pol[itical] school in London will strengthen the demand in Cambridge for a bona fide economics school, under a Board which shall regard it as a study worth having in itself, and not as an "inferior" study; as the framers of this deadly scheme openly avowed that they regarded it."
Summary	Describes his distress at having signed Report of Moral Sciences Board [containing proposals for revision of the Tripos] against his better judgment. "It was difficult to know what to do. For Sidgwick was already incensed against me re [word underlined] women: and I dreaded to intensify and perpetuate that conflict. It was cowardly: and I am deeply ashamed, and sorry. It was one of those errors that eat into a mans life. With the exception of my going to Bristol & undertaking work for which I had not physical strength enough in combination with my own studies, it is to me the most grievous deed I have ever done."
Free field	The year on this letter has previously been misread as 1891. See Foxwell 1/61/1 for Marshall's letter of 7 Sep 1897 to him pleading not to sell his books, and earlier letters to Foxwell re Tripos reform. Earliest known use of this style of headed paper by Marshall is Nov 1895, and his writing in 1897 is much smaller than previously.

Summary	At recent Moral Science Board meeting he urged Board to try to get another lecturer in addition to [Herbert Somerton] Foxwell. Has since learned that his own fellowship at St John's has been increased to £200, so he may be able to do something "on my own hook." Feels [Arthur Cecil] Pigou would be ideal, but hardly ripe for lecturing in 1900/1. Thinks of asking [Arthur L.] Bowley to give course of about 10 lectures on statistics and statistical method. "But as the loose cash has been jingling in my pocket for less than 24 hours, I am not ready to "say something and stick to it.""

Summary	Is worried about [Herbert Somerton] Foxwell's finances. Asks Keynes's advice on appealing to Moral Sciences Board to establish Readership for him. Summary	Discusses in detail problems of scheduling [Arthur Cecil] Pigou's lectures to minimise clashing with others.
Summary	"It is generally agreed that the movement for the development of modern economics and politics should be hung up for a time: and that some papers on the subject should be circulated, in the first instance confidentially, about a year hence. I am very pleased with this result. We shall thus look at the whole question broadly, and without hurry."

Summary	Pleads with Keynes to accept his reasoning in wishing to downplay Logic in training of economists. Repeats view that irrelevance of much of Moral Sciences Tripos explains why in 16 years he has had hardly any first class students at Cambridge. "I have had many pupils whom I have cared for: but only a few whom I have loved. Among those - of the male gender - you and Pigou have a special charm for me" and it grieves him to be in disagreement. "If pushed, I must do all in my power to liberate economics from its shackles. But if, without weakening much [word underlined] the force of my position, I can omit anything which you dislike, or add anything you like, I will most gladly do it." "...Put yourself in my position. I am an old man. For many reasons I could wish I were out of harness now. I have no time to wait. Economics is drifting under the control of people like Sidney Webb and Arthur Chamberlain. And all the while, through causes for which no one is - in the main - responsible, the curriculum to which I am officially attached has not provided me with one single high class man devoting himself to economics during the sixteen years of my Professorship." [All words after "responsible" underlined, the 2 words "one single" underlined twice.]

"...my main reason for thinking that the association of economics with Mental [sic] Science has been so disastrous is that in my opinion it is essential that students should acquire an intensive knowledge of facts, i.e. big facts [4 words underlined], in order that they may understand how a sense of proportion is, after sound reasoning, the most important equipment of an economist."

Summary	Discusses tactics for forthcoming discussion at Moral Sciences Board of motion put forward by [John McTaggart Ellis] McTaggart [apparently about whether Political Economy to be excluded from Moral Sciences Tripos given establishment of separate Economics Tripos]. Important [Herbert Somerton] Foxwell be present. Marshall's wishes are against McTaggart and pro Keynes' amendment.
Summary	Likely to be adjourned meeting of Economics Board in late October, suggests main resolution discussed 4th November. Suggests Keynes draw up amendment perhaps in consultation with Foxwell and/or [William Ritchie] Sorley. Marshall expects to vote for any resolution on which all 3 agree.

Summary	"Of course I cannot ask you to endorse the main body of the letter, partly because you are not as free to eulogize the young men as I am.
Summary	"The difficulty about the Cambridge Association appeal struck me in the night. It gave me the worst night I have had for years. If [Henry] Higgs and Co. clutch the money, or any considerable part of it, which we might have got, and direct it from low pay for high energy to high pay for low energy, we may be wrecked. If we can keep our present team together, I believe that we shall have ere long the finest school in the world."

Summary	Probably deposited by Mrs J.N. [Florence Ada] Keynes
Summary	Enumerates further correspondence with [Henry] Higgs: (1) Marshall's letter of 9th [December] resuming his earlier letter [possibly that one referred to in Marshall 1/138] but without personal references, with intimation that it may be shown to anyone; (2) letter 2 days later saying that after consideration he urges Higgs to write to [John Neville] Keynes because [quoting himself] "Keynes has perhaps a higher opinion of the importance of Foxwell's speciality to Cambridge than I have: he has not committed himself, as I have for the last forty years, to the opinion that Professors ought as a rule to resign at the age of sixty: partly for that reason, he does not rate as highly as I do the evils which might arise from the precedent that would be set by providing a temporary Professorship on the understanding that Foxwell should be elected to it." ; (3) some letters marked "private" in which he explains his reservations about [Herbert Somerton] Foxwell's judgement on economic matters and his behaviour about election [to chair vacated by Marshall].
Summary	"Holding the opinions which you do, I think you would be right to promote Higgs' scheme, provided it is so worked as not to undercut the expected appeal by the Cambridge Association on behalf of the Economics school. But at most I can be "benevolently" neutral. And if, as is possible, the question is raised whether a second Professorship - should there be one - should go to Clapham or Foxwell, I must [word underlined] speak for Clapham." Gives reasons for supporting Clapham.

Summary	Mimeographed text containing excerpts from 3 letters from Marshall to Keynes [JNKeynes 1/150 of 26 Nov 1889, 1/151 of 2 Dec 1889 and 1/196 of 30 Jan 1902], with brief introductory material by C.W. Guillebaud [inferred]. First 2 letters deal with Consumer's Rent, the last with Marshall's 'Plea for the Creation of a Curriculum in Economics and associated branches of Political Economy,' and his complaint about paucity of first-class minds among his Cambridge pupils.
Free field	Apparently prepared in connection with Guillebaud's work on variorum edition [Alfred Marshall 'Principles of Economics: Ninth (Variorum) Edition with annotations by C.W. Guillebaud' (1961)]. First 2 excerpts, with introductory remarks slightly revised, appear on pp. 260-1 of vol. II of that work. The 3 excerpts from 1902 letter are taken from pp. 3, 8-9 and 14 of the original. Only the first was reproduced in op. cit., vol. II, p. 151.

Summary	Keynes having sent comments on manuscript of book by Nicholson [probably 'Money and Monetary Problems', 1888] latter asks him to clarify one comment. Thinks Keynes's suggestion on theoretical treatment of bi-metallism so useful that he is writing a new chapter "in the most neutral tone possible". Proposes to republish his address at Manchester and another at Glasgow on "Morality of Bi-Metallism", also paper on "Stability of the Fixed Ratio [between Gold and Silver under International Bi-Metallism]". Asks Keynes to comment on Manchester paper, particularly whether to keep reference to [George Joachim] Goschen.

Content
Summary	Found little to amend in last 3 chapters of Keynes's book ['Scope and Method of Political Economy']. Thinks note on mathematical methods should be expanded into a chapter with more examples. Previous writers have not succeeded in explaining clearly enough for the ordinary student. It is more needed than chapter on deduction and induction.
Summary	Complains of action of "that old wife Gow [?]" who stripped him of anonymity as author of certain books. Luckily books have been a success here and abroad.

Summary	Most grateful for Keynes's comments on his proofs. Glad he likes chapter on Chartered Companies [Chapter XXIV of Vol.II of 'Principles of Political Economy']. Admits it is rather historical compared with pure theory of foreign trade, which he finds one of most difficult in the subject. Had to rewrite most of that chapter. Too late for structural alterations except in case of fundamental error.

Summary	Sent [Alfred] Marshall copy of his book [A Project of Empire: a critical study of the economics of imperialism, with special reference to the ideas of Adam Smith (1909)]. "Generally he sends me in return a printed form with his compts. Judge of my amazement when I receive almost by return a letter in which he says: "it will be of exceptional interest and assistance to me as well as a public benefit." What do you think of that? He then goes on to say that there is a lot of Adam Smith in his coming book - in the modern part. Generally Marshall only favours me with the most vague intimations of his labours. What has happened? This change of attitude is at any rate pleasing personally."

Summary	Sends copy of plan for proposed Dictionary [of Political Economy]. Has made considerable changes since Keynes saw it, to give fair proportions of space to each important heading. Has had interesting discussions with [Herbert Somerton] Foxwell at Bath, who agrees with Palgrave's view on how to handle debatable topics, i.e. entry should state views of those who had previously written about topic and not views of author of entry. Has prepared statement to be sent to authors, will send Keynes copy for comment.

Summary	Keynes proposed headings 'Art of Political Economy', 'Applied Political Economy' and 'Abstract Political Economy.' Palgrave can wait a month or so for them, but they must not be too long. Thanks him for sending Marshall's postcard. As [Francis Amasa] Walker has not replied, has written to [Frank William] Taussig, but this means delay, won't meet his target date for first part of dictionary. Discusses future targets.

Summary	He has been asked to write paper for Bankers Institute on Note Circulation.
Summary	He would prefer [in the Dictionary] to show the name of each article's author, but if Keynes prefers anonymity, he will accept it, although unsigned articles are supposed to have been written by the Editor. Is trying to keep spelling uniform, although this not always easy.
Summary	Hopes to get first part into sheet proof in about 3 months. Size of parts not yet fixed but would like to keep them relatively small, about 96 pp.
Summary	Glad to hear Keynes's book ['Scope and Method of Political Economy'] going well. Next batch of dictionary, D-K, not due to be written for 6 months, by which time he hopes Keynes will be available.
Summary	There ought to be an article on "Chair, Socialists of". Could Keynes undertake it?
Free field	"Socialists of the Chair" [Kathedersozialisten] was nickname given by liberal journalist H.B. Oppenheim in 1872 to group of younger German professors of political economy.

Summary	Asks Keynes to comment on his draft article on 'Boycotting'. Macmillans agree with him about size of parts. Hence C will not begin until Part II - but he would still like to receive Keynes's article on Consumer Rent whenever possible. Macmillans want the parts to come out at 3-month intervals. Question now is how many parts should be completed before one appears.
Summary	Is unlikely to get to Cambridge before Christmas. His wife's health seems finally to be improving, hopes she will regain strength.

Summary	Can wait until year-end for article on 'Consumer Rent'. Thanks Keynes for article on 'Boycotting' [see JNKeynes 1/251], which he has modified and sent to printers.
Summary	List of D-K articles fairly complete, would like to allot subjects and precede this by discussions with possible authors. Hence proposes to visit London, Oxford and Cambridge in early December, would it be convenient for the Keyneses to put him up in Cambridge? Wants to call on [Alfred] Marshall, [Francis Ysidro] Edgeworth and [Herbert Somerton] Foxwell, "but knowing their ways I should not propose more with them."

Summary	Glad that [William Ernest] Johnson will undertake 'Methods' "but both Logic and Mathematics must be commemorated and the assistance they have been to Economics." [Francis Ysidro] Edgeworth will probably write on 'mathematical method' and hopefully Johnson on 'logical method' or if not, Venn. Would have preferred Keynes to do whole article but suspects Keynes would have understated his own contributions to economic methods.

Summary	Congratulates Keynes on Maynard [Keynes]'s success [he had come second in Civil Service examination], glad he chose home Civil Service.
Summary	Third volume of 'Dictionary' must be reprinted with added Appendix. Wants Keynes to write notice on Henry Sidgwick covering his Ethics as well as Economics, career and character. And let him know if he thinks of any other topic to be included in Appendix. Asking [Alfred] Marshall to write on Cambridge Economics Tripos, hopes he will. Teaching of Economics has expanded so much since 'Dictionary' planned almost 20 years ago that "there must be other classes and university work mentioned." Cambridge exams are the most important, wants article to be good.

Summary	Returns Keynes's extracts/abstracts [?] with comments and also copy of instructions dictated [by Henry Sidgwick] about works Keynes referred to. Sees no harm in referring to possible publication but perhaps more vaguely, since unclear exactly what can be published.
Summary	Some [of Sidgwick's] literary essays which he himself thought should be reprinted are scattered in various periodicals and there may be more than he recorded. Also some lectures in manuscript - but he was doubtful whether more than perhaps one was fit for publication.
Summary	Encloses Prof. Mandello's letter [missing], would like it returned. Does Keynes remember him enough to know if his views are of value, does he know anything about the "Institut de Sociologie" and whether it is worth suggesting to them that they publish any lectures found to be worth publishing?

Content
Summary	Returns his paper, which she has been very glad to read. Suggests some corrections/additions to information on Sidgwick's early career and writings.
Summary	Agrees with how Keynes has referred to Sidgwick's unpublished work.
Summary	"I am not sure that it is quite true that what he did for women's education constituted the main [word underlined] practical work of his life. Or at least it depends on the exact sense in which the words are taken. He spent a great deal more time on University affairs of various sorts I think. But no doubt Newnham is there as a definite and visible result of the work."
Summary	Questions whether he gave more money and work to Newnham or to the University, and what Keynes said about his memory.
Summary	Thanks Keynes for responding her queries about Prof Mandello.
Summary	Encloses letter she has found [missing] and asks him to come and look through some papers connected with political economy.

Summary	Has now read to end of book [3rd edition of Henry Sidgwick's 'Principles of Political Economy', being edited by Keynes], has a few more comments.
Summary	Wants to form rough idea of future publication or re-publication of her husband's writings, will discuss with Prof. [James] Ward and Miss [E.E. Constance] Jones. Should British Association address be included in collected essays, or is it sufficiently incorporated in book [3rd edition]? Thinks she asked this before, cannot remember Keynes's reply.
Summary	Postscript: Refers to difficult bit of text [in 'Principles of Political Economy'], cannot remember whether she previously discussed it with Keynes or with her husband, since he sometimes tried out bits of text on her.
